'Post Mauryan Economy: Networks of Trade'

Suchandra Ghosh

The post Mauryan period in Indian history which stretches from 200BCE to 300 CE witnessed the presence of several powers in north and north-western India. Long distance oversea networks along with inland networks helped in circulation of men and commodities. The period witnessed unprecedented growth in the economic life which was visible in all spheres of economy.

The Main focus of the lecture was on the non-agrarian sector though basic ideas about the agrarian sector was discussed.. Themes of discussions were Trade routes-- mostly external, two Port towns of Barbarikon and Barygaza and their hinterlands. Trade with the eastern Roman empire was briefly discussed along with Central Asian connection to the silk route. The relation between politics and trade was highlighted with case studies.

The linkage between the hinterland and foreland of the port of Barygaza was highlighted. A remarkable feature of economic life was proliferation of crafts which is closely related with expanding trade. Various types of craftsmen were mentioned. The lecture ended with a thorough discussion of monetization during the period.
